"A Platonic and Qualitative Theory of Powers"

Matthew Tugby (University of Durham)

In this talk I argue for a theory of powers that differs from most other views in two fundamental ways. First, I argue that powers are best understood within a Platonic framework of universals. Second, I argue against the popular 'pure powers' view, which says that (at least some) properties are entirely constituted by their modal profiles.